NACC have established a team focusing particularly on young people aged between 16 and 29 who suffer with IBD. NACC's has a new micro site for young people

They are currently carrying out a survey of young people aged 16-29 with IBD, finding out your thoughts on a number of topics such as medication, surgery, transition, education and relationships.

They really need as many people as possible to take part so that they get a good view of what life is like as a young person with IBD. They'll then take these findings and make suggestions based upon them to relevant people, like Healthcare Professionals, to tell them exactly how you want to be treated, for example.

You can access the survey via their website or directly at www.nsmresearch.co.uk
